Voting against moving the bill out of committee (good): Browne, Costa, Earll, Fontana.

SB 1250, the so called "Marriage Protection Amendment" to the Pennsylvania State Constitution - that would disallow any legal recognition of a relationship that is substantially similar to marriage, unless it was one man legally married to one woman, has moved ahead out of the Judiciary Committee toward a vote in the full State Senate. Two of the State Senators on the Judiciary Committee represent the Lehigh Valley, one did the right things, one did the very wrong things. Read about it in What's That About on page 2.

What's That About?

Readers write or email "What's That About" editor Liz Bradbury with questions about GLBT issues.

Dear What's That About, I read something about a new anti-gay PA Constitutional Amendment passing out of committee and going to the State Senate for a vote and that Lehigh Valley State Senators were particularly involved. Is this true and what should we do about it? Signed, Ready To Work For Equality

Dear RTWFE, Yes, those far right Republicans, desperate to get conservatives out to vote in upcoming elections, have introduced another so called "Marriage Protection" Constitutional Amendment which would enshrine in the PA Constitution discrimination against the gay community by saying that anything that might be substantially similar to marriage would be restricted to one man and one woman.

Just recently, the Amendment went to the State Senate Judiciary Committee to be reviewed and considered. The 14 committee members happened to include both Lehigh Valley State Senators; Pat Browne (R-Lehigh County) and Lisa Boscola (D-Northampton County). It ultimately passed out of the committee by a vote of 10 to 4 - which was bad.

Reports from activists on our side about the committee vote state that Pat Browne did all the right things. He asked strong questions about the content and the ramifications, he spoke for and voted for further hearings and he ultimately voted to not allow the Amendment to advance out of committee.

On the other hand, State Senator Lisa Boscola did all the wrong things. She voted against hearings on the language of the Amendment, even though she had not even read a word about the Amendment. She asked no good questions, and ultimately she voted for the Amendment to advance out of committee. The reasons she gave for doing all these things were weak and ill considered. And last year, she was the only Democrat Senator who supported this negative, unfair, bigoted legislation.

Earlier today, I saw a TV Public Service Announcement about consumer rights which featured Lisa Boscola herself saying: If you have a consumer issue, or if you have been treated unfairly in any way, contact my office.

So contact Lisa Boscola: 610-868-8667, boscola@pasenate.com. Tell her you've been treated unfairly...by her. Ask her to vote against the Constitutional Amendment when it comes up for a full Senate vote.

Also, please contact Pat Browne's office and thank him for doing the work and voting the way he did. Please tell him you understand that it's hard to take this kind of stand in an election year, and that you are very grateful he did. Pat Browne: 610-821-8468pbrowne@pasen.gov

If you live in Berk's County, please contact State Representative Tom Caltagirone, head of the House Judiciary Committee, in case this Amendment goes to the House (which it probably will). 610-376-1529, tcaltagi@pahouse.net. Please tell him to keep this Amendment from going any further because it's wrong and bad for the State.

If you are part of the PDN Photo Project and you live or work in Northampton County, I'd like to send your Photo Project picture to Boscola. If it's OK with you for me to send it, contact me. (610-432-5449)lbradbury@padiversity.org

WHERE'S SCOTTY?

SCOTTY IN THE CITY

Scott was too busy this month contemplating the upcoming NY Pride Festivities in June and studying for Trivia tournaments with the team he's playing (and winning) on, to do his column...but no fear, he'll be back next month.

APRIL 22 PRIMARY GLBT VOTER CHOICES

Both the Clinton and Obama campaigns provided VGP with information written by local GLBT community members on their candidates (VGP allowed 200 words max and restricted the response to GLBT issues only). The McCain campaign chose not to respond.

OBAMA - BY J.C. LEE

There is little difference between Barack Obama and Hillary Clinton on the issues. For the GLBTQ Community, an important distinction is Obama's early and full rejection of the abominable Defense of Marriage Act, passed by the Clinton Administration and only partially rejected by Clinton. On paper, these are typical Democratic Party candidates; however in principle and practice, we see a glaring distinction.

In January, Obama used Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Day to deliver a speech at Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta. He bravely chastised the black community's rejection of gays and lesbians. In Texas, he was the only candidate to advertise to the GLBTQ community and went so far as to write an open letter to the gay community voicing his support. This is important, because it charts a dramatically different course than his rival. Throughout this campaign, unprompted and in places unpopular, Barack Obama has confronted audiences with our community's issues. Unlike the tepid response to the gay marriage fiasco of the 2004 election, Obama continually and actively brings gay & lesbian people into the diverse coalition he's building for America, and unlike that election, this year I feel I'm finally voting for something rather than against it.

-----J.C. Lee is a playwright and director. He is the Artistic Director of the Omicron Theatre Project and a member of the Theatre Faculty at the Lehigh Valley Charter High School for the Performing Arts in Bethlehem, PA. Currently, he works with the leadership team in the Lehigh Valley to help elect Barack Obama.

CLINTON BY ROB HOPKINS

Hillary Clinton has been a longtime friend of the LGBT community. As Senator she has fought against the Federal Marriage Amendment, and feels discrimination has no place in the Constitution. She supported the Employment Non-Discrimination Act (ENDA), which would finally end workplace discrimination of LGBT individuals. She has consistently co-sponsored anti-hate crimes legislation, which would protect LGBT individuals from crimes motivated by hatred for our community. Additionally, she has fought for additional AIDS funding and expanded access to services. Hillary Clinton has developed legislation that would create equal benefits for all federal employees and their same-sex partners. As First Lady and Senator she has participated in numerous LGBT events.

As President, Hillary Clinton will improve the lives of LGBT individuals. Her detailed plan includes support for civil unions, to ensure that all Americans have equal benefits. She will continue the fight to pass ENDA, because it's inconceivable that people can still be fired because of who they are or who they love. She will demand that congress pass federal hate crimes legislation and will continue the fight to end Don't Ask Don't Tell, so that LGBT members of the military can serve with courage, honor, patriotism AND PRIDE. VOTE HILLARY!

-----Rob Hopkins is an openly-gay Lehigh Valley native, volunteering his time in support of Hillary Clinton. He serves as Vice Chair of the PA Democratic Party LGBT Caucus, Vice President of Pride of the Greater Lehigh Valley and has served various LGBT political organizations. He can be reached at 610-739-2461 or Rob@LVforClinton.com

POLITICAL FILMS

CITIZEN KANE, DR. STRANGELOVE, THE MANCHURIAN CANDIDATE, THE BEST MAN, THE CANDIDATE, WAG THE DOG, SICKO, BOB ROBERTS, MALCOLM X, ELECTION...these are few of the titles that repeatedly surface when you Google "political films." I think all these titles are great but I have my own favorites (you knew I did).

My top ten: (as of today and in no particular order), AMERICAN PRESIDENT, DAVE, MISSING, SEVEN DAYS IN MAY, PATH TO WAR (HBO), SPARTACUS, REDS, BULWORTH, THE OFFICIAL STORY and BORN YESTERDAY. BORN YESTERDAY, a political film, you say? Why, yes. It is. When Paul Verrell (the never more handsome William Holden) is hired to smarten up Billie Dawn (the fabulous Judy Holliday) so she won't sabotage boyfriend Harry's political deals, the film becomes a crash course in good citizenship. Comedy has always helped the political medicine go down. Think Charlie Chaplin films, THE GREAT DICTATOR, in particular, which dared satirize Hitler well before we entered WWII. Think NINE TO FIVE.

Can my generation imagine its American experience without MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON? TO KILL A MOCKINGBIRD, THE DEFIANT ONES, GUESS WHO'S COMING TO DINNER, THE DEERHUNTER? Would we have felt the true horror of Pol Pot's regime in Cambodia without THE KILLING FIELDS? I'd watch NIXON again if only for the extraordinary Joan Allen, also front and center in THE CONTENDER. I was a factory worker myself when NORMA RAE premiered. That was one job where I DID stand on the picket line. And I always felt that THE YEAR OF LIVING DANGEROUSLY, SALVADOR and UNDER FIRE formed a perfect trilogy of the third world side of Cold War politics.

I was still weighing my vote in the primary when I watched PRIMARY COLORS again a few days ago. The raw ambition of the Clinton surrogates in the film is disturbing, to say the least. But is Susan Stanton really Hillary or just someone's idea of her? Does the film mean to indict just them or the political process as a whole? There is no movie precedent that comes to my mind for Barack Obama's candidacy but perhaps it's a topic films will finally address now that it's part of us. In the end, I would no more allow a movie to effect how I vote than I would the talking heads of cable (although I still listen pretty closely when it's Jon Stewart or Rachel Maddow doing the talking!) but films can illuminate the impact of politics on our lives in a way few other mediums can. And I haven't even touched on what documentaries have added to our collective socio-political consciousness!

Whatever you do in April, don't forget to vote. And maybe drop by a Blockbuster or Hollywood Video on the way home?

MUHLENBERG PRESENTS WILLIAM SHAKESPEARES LOVE'S LABOR'S LOST

April 24 - 27 in the Baker Theatre, Trexler Pavilion for Theatre & Dance, Muhlenberg College Tickets www.muhlenberg.edu/tickets or 484.664.3333 Groups: emailboxoffice@muhlenberg.edu

Engage in a battle of the sexes writ with elegance, edge and wit in one of Shakespeare's most dazzling poetic comedies. Reset in the contemporary world of a luxury sea-side resort, powerful men who have foresworn the world's fortunes to devote themselves to the life of the mind are immediately tempted by unexpected visitors - several beautiful and saavy ladies. Amid misdirected letters and mistaken identities, surprise encounters and brilliant conversations - this is a tale of desire, foolishness, and love.

ZANNA DON'T! AT MUHLENBERG

Sweetness, Magic and Light in Zanna, Don't!
April 2-6 in the Studio Theatre, Trexler Pavilion for Theatre & Dance, Muhlenberg College

Groups: emailboxoffice@muhlenberg.edu

Finding the perfect match isn't easy in this campy musical comedy eight high school students tossed between love and acceptance. The musical fairy tale imagines an alternate world where homosexuality is the norm and straight people are considered deviant. The plot focuses on two high school couples: Mike, a chess champ, hooks up with Steve, a football star, even as waitress Roberta connects with mechanical bull rider Kate. Trouble brews in the show's gay universe when high school pals Kate and Steve find they are attracted to each other after sharing a passionate moment in the school musical. With the help of his magic wand, Zanna tends to the hearts and lives of all around him in this story based on a humorous and hopeful message of tolerance. The musical received a 2003 Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation Media Award for its "fair, accurate and inclusive representations" of the gay community and issues that effect their lives.

"Think of the show as a bright hybrid of Bye, Bye Birdie, Grease, with a touch more social satire and heart." Kenneth Jones for PLAYBILL.

RANTS & RAVES BY STEPHEN T. LIBBY MAKING UP FOR LOST TIME

I have been remiss in not thanking everyone who attended the fundraisers Gaydar Magazine has hosted over the past few months. The end of November was our kick off to the Holiday season of partying at Lee Gribbens in Emmaus. Around $3000 was raised and split between FACT & Pride of the Greater Lehigh Valley. Gay owned with scrumptious food and a friendly bar Lee Gribbens is the place to hang out on Thursday nights. We co-hosted a fundraiser to benefit The Gay Men's Chorus with TakeOver Lehigh Valley, the Woods Campground and Diamondz at American Hairlines. The fresh pasta bar was as visually appealing as it was tasty and the cosmos were out of this world and helped raise $1500. The gym at gay owned AH is stocked with hi-end equipment and hot trainers. Who said that? Moving on- Our 4th Annual Oscar Bash raised over $3000 for Pride GLV. This year the site was the always gay friendly and smoke free (for those of you who like that sort of thing) Allentown BrewWorks. Check out the ABW Martini Club which benefits Pride GLV.

Speaking of the Oscars. They sucked! I didn't like many of the nominees to begin with. Yes, I know last month's column was all about I love this...and I love that. I love everything. Blah! Blah! Blah! I'm a gay man. The only specialty group expected to change their minds more than women. I hated the way over-hyped Michael Clayton. It's only saving grace, Tilda Swinton, did NOT deserve the Oscar. It should have gone to Amy Ryan. Yes, I was happy that Marion Cotillard won for Best Actress. Juno was sweet but too self-precious. Enchanted's Amy Adams was unjustly overlooked. Daniel Day Lewis is a great actor but he was in full on Bette Davis as Baby Jane Hudson mode in There Will be Blood. The award is for best acting not the most acting. The best of the year was Gone Baby Gone, Into the Wild, The Bourne Ultimatum, Ratatouille and Knocked Up. I guarantee if you invest the money in a rental you will not be disappointed in any of these. The Oscars should take a page from the Golden Globe handbook and offer prizes for comedy/musical films and performances. And serve drinks to the attendees. Jack Nicholson is so much more Jack Nicholson after tossing back a few. I miss Joan Rivers on the Red Carpet. She knew nothing about anyone's career and was always sporting a new face. In preparation to wear her crown, I demand that if he is going to do every hosting gig in Hollywood, Ryan Seacrest must forget half of what he knows about the celebs he interviews and start using Botox. Seacrest, out. He should be.

THEY SAY HAVING KIDS KEEPS YOU YOUNG

In our pre-parenting days, one would think we probably had a pretty active social life; hitting the clubs, making appearances at all the gala events, and partying hard with the gay boys and drag queens. One would think that maybe we even had a social life. But just prior to adopting Lucas, it seemed like we were settling uncomfortably into middle age. More like we were spiraling uncontrollably there. Lounging around and putting on weight. It was a gay man's nightmare. Then came the child. That turned our life around, and around, and around. Our world flew right off its late thirties orbit and landed us right back into our early twenties again. Woo hoo!

During our Son's infant stage, we once again were awake until all hours of the night. Not out partying but changing diapers. But still we were up way past 2 am, and then getting up for work the next day. Kinda felt like twenty-one again. During our son's toddler stage, we had so many of our family and friends offer to watch Lucas so that we could have some free time, we felt guilty not going out and taking full advantage of what their generosity made possible. We actually found ourselves able to go to some parties, do a little clubbing, and attend some gala events. The irony of it is, whenever we did go anywhere without Lucas, everyone would ask about him or wonder where he was.

"Would you like a splash of guilt with that drink?"

"No, but make it a double."

As Lucas moved past his toddler years he became very mobile. In fact he was very fast, and quite naughty. Naughty and fast is a formidable combination. We had to become quick on our feet again. There wasn't much lounging around anymore. The side benefit was that it wasn't as easy to put on the extra pounds. Fortunately by this time, we weren't having frequent late nights up with baby anymore. Also Lucas was at the age where we could take him out with us and experience so much again through his eyes. Going to a movie took on a whole new meaning...it meant that we would be watching a two-hour cartoon about a bee whose mission would be to save the world. Going to a carnival became a whole new experience. When was the last time we got to eat cotton candy, candy apples, and caramel corn without guilt? We bought the stuff for the kid, and will be darned if it's going to waste.

Surely this will all catch up with us. We cannot remain young forever. By the time Lucas is a teenager, we will already be in our fifties. The gray hair will be there and the arthritis may be setting in a bit. Guess that's why they make hair dye and hip replacements.

Ask a "Family" Lawyer By Attorney Kate Lynn

Dear Kate, My girlfriend and I conceived our baby using a known sperm donor. We initially agreed that he would not be responsible for any child support, but only if he did not request any visitation with our daughter. He has not been involved in our daughter's life (she is now three years old), but I have lost my job, was the sole breadwinner, and child support would help us financially. Is he responsible to pay? Feeling Very

Unsupported

Dear FVU, In Pennsylvania, this known sperm donor, would not be responsible for paying child support under these facts. The laws concerning sperm, egg and embryo donations are ever evolving in Pennsylvania and across our nation. The case involving Ivonne V. Ferguson vs. Joel L. McKiernan wended its way through our court system for several years.

It began in Dauphin County, and the Court of Common pleas held in 2003 that Mr. McKiernan as the known sperm donor was the legal father for twin boys. The Court found that the oral agreement between him and Ms. Ferguson was not enforceable as it bargained away a right to child support that neither adult held. Another factual twist in this case came as Ms. Ferguson was married at the time of conception, and as a general rule a husband is a presumptive father. However, the actions taken by her husband in leaving the home two years earlier, filing for divorce on the day of the in vitro fertilization (IVF) procedure was performed, and obtaining a divorce decree mitigated against such presumption. Relying on child support guidelines, the known sperm donor was ordered to pay monthly child support and a corresponding arrearage of over sixty thousand dollars was ordered and due immediately. In 2004, the Superior Court of Pennsylvania agreed with the trial court.

However, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania disagreed by their split decision entered December 27, 2007. The Court held that the agreement between mother and known sperm donor was, in fact, enforceable. In most traditional cases involving sexual reproduction, the parties cannot deny a child his or her requisite child support. The argument of the known sperm donor was that upholding the lower court's ruling "would call into question the legal status of all sperm donors, including those who donate anonymously through sperm banks."

Several states have adopted the Uniform Parentage Act which states that anonymous donors using a clinic for donation have no legal rights nor any obligations to any resulting children.

FAITH PAGES by Adrian Shanker FOR THE BIBLE TELLS ME SO

This film got so many positive responses, I was very excited to finally get my hands on a copy of the recently released DVD to "For The Bible Tells Me So." Framed as an expose of religious discrimination against gays and lesbians, the powerful film resonates with many viewers, undoubtedly changing some people's view points. The film makers interview religious people of stature like Desmond Tutu, Bishop Gene Robinson, Chrissy Gephardt, Dick Gephardt, and many others. And while some serious theological questions are considered, and the film won many awards, I couldn't help but feel that it lacked substance.

As I was watching the film, it seemed more and more like it was produced by the Human Rights Campaign. As such, it reeked of a "normalizing" effect - gays and lesbians are just like everyone, Andrew Sullivan may like the film - but to most of us in the queer community, it falls short of accepting us as who we are - and instead embraces a gay and lesbian community that is no different from its straight counterpart.

The film does not delve into queer or feminist spirituality and interpretation of text, nor does it include talk of queer faith organizations like the Metropolitan Community Church, The Radical Faeries, Interweave, or the World Congress of GLBTQ Jews (or any others.)

For the Bible Tells Me So is an important film for a person who has had little to no contact with an openly LGBT person, or someone who is a religious conservative, but for most of us - the film only reinforces the gender binary and represses sexuality to make us all "normal." Whatever that means...

A COMMUNITY CHALLENGE FOR MAJOR CHANGE

Not long ago, I got a call from an agency at a major Lehigh Valley hospital, asking if PA Diversity Network would like to apply for a very small grant to provide GLBT community members with smoking cessation information. This agency was working specifically to give this kind of support to three Lehigh Valley "disparate" populations. Their literature identified the groups as: The Latino Community, the African American Community and the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, and Transgender Community. (By the way, disparate means specifically "Containing elements very different from others." -- Which is true about each of these communities, certainly when it comes to access to health care.)

I and PDN are strongly committed to the health and well being of the local GLBT population, so I asked if I could write proposals for two plans. One plan was aimed at creating a pamphlet that referenced same-sex families, with GLBT specific information. That was the plan I wanted to do. And the other plan aimed at creating and advertising a venue to present reasons to GLBT people, why smoking is unhealthy. This was the one they wanted to do, so I wrote it too, even though it's a little patronizing to presume there are actually any LV GLBT people who don't already know smoking is bad for you.

I filled out all the forms and turned the grant proposals in at the deadline and still haven't heard back about them.

Frankly, it doesn't take a rocket scientist to see that neither of these plans provide any new incentives for people to quit smoking. Upon reflection, I came up with a much better plan.

If the hospitals are honestly committed to improving the health of disparate populations, then here's my much more exciting proposal:

PA Diversity Network will pledge to get 50 Lehigh Valley GLBT people to fully commit to major health-based life changes. Possible changes could include: Stopping or cutting down on smoking, losing weight for health, maintaining a program of regular exercise, eating more healthy foods, etc. These 50 participants would set goals and commit to reaching them.

In exchange, the hospitals would provide a significant incentive; they would have to grant same-sex domestic partner benefits for the partners of hospital employees.

Simple, huh? And what an incentive! Personally, I would commit to losing 10% to 15% body weight in exchange for the hospitals doing this important, yet low cost (actually no cost to them) thing. I've mentioned this to GLBT hospital employees and others community members, and everyone I've spoken to has been willing to take on this project. What a positive thing for our community. After all, just granting the benefits will improve the health of people who don't have them, but need them. Furthermore, if these major employers do begin to grant benefits, it will influence other area employers to follow suit. It's totally win-win.

This will be a very public challenge, not just for the people adopting more healthy habits, but a challenge to the hospitals to demonstrate whether or not they are really committed to the health of disparate populations, including the GLBT community. Are they willing to promote a program that is likely to succeed? Or are they only interested in pushing programs that will certainly fail?

If you are interested in being one of the 50 (or more) GLBT people in this challenge, please contact me - 610-432-5449, info@padiversity.org. We'll be covering this in the VGP, so stay tuned.

TWO GOOD CANDIDATES LEAVE ME NO CLEAR CHOICE IN THE PRIMARY

I don't know if I am ambivalent or if I am just beginning not to care about the primary because I don't really believe the outcome will make a difference on the issues that really matter to me. Don't mistake my position, I know how I will vote in the general election. I will choose to vote for someone other than a man of white privilege. Not that I don't have good friends who are white men of privilege - sounds like the old 'but I have gay friends' doesn't it? I just don't understand most white men of privilege. I don't believe they really understand minority issues, primarily because they often try to insist to minorities that they do. In this primary election though, I have the unique option of choosing between two eminently qualified candidates representing distinct minority classes. And I can't choose. Why?

For one thing, the differences between Clinton and Obama on the economy, health care, war and education aren't so incredibly different to me, but more importantly, neither Clinton or Obama have, to my satisfaction, sufficiently proclaimed their support for equal civil rights for our community. As I see it, if they can't speak out about the 'hard issues' to a general audience in the way they do in their speeches in GLBT forums, how will they address the issues once elected? My skepticism about the candidate's positions stems from their reported responses to voters from different constituencies. For example, Clinton tells conservatives that she is personally opposed to gay marriage and touts her support of DOMA, then speaks to GLBT audiences about support for civil unions and her vote against the Federal Marriage Amendment. Obama has said that he doesn't think marriage is a civil right, but that not being discriminated against is a civil right. While both candidates have at some point in their campaigns voiced support of civil unions with "marriage like" legal rights, I am cautiously alert for their equivocation when they speak to mainstream audiences.

Both Clinton and Obama have challenged us to pick the candidate that can best handle the 'hard issues.' Yet, neither will simply and unequivocally state their support for equal civil rights for GLBT Americans. To me, this is a precursor to how they will handle the hard issues. For the Primary, how can I give my support to a candidate who, when they are faced with a simple issue of equal civil rights, spins in the direction of the prevailing audience?

VALLEY GAY PRESS BOOK REVIEW

The Guessing Game by Ted Randler, 2002, Palari Publishing, $16.95

A vicious murder in a gay bar, no witnesses and hate graffiti in the victims blood on the wall gets the mystery started. An intriguing game of chat room seduction plays into the hands of a cyber serial killer. An opportunistic reporter interferes with the police and clashes with the gay community. Ex-cop Tommy Stone, who never seems to finish anything, is struggling to deal with a southern mother, an ex-wife and his gay lover and gets entangled in solving the crime. The game ends with a surprising twist. Lots of bar scenes and cyber chatter. Good reading for the guys in the crowd. - Review by Patricia Sullivan

We believe it would improve the quality of life in the Lehigh Valley if all people were equally protected from unfair discrimination based upon actual or perceived: race, color, religion, national origin, ancestry or place of birth, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, marital status, family status, age, disability or use of a guide animal, in the areas of employment, housing, and public accommodation.

"These shocking figures prove that the Bush administration's rejection of science-based sex education in public schools and its obsessive support of homophobic abstinence-only programs -- now totaling $1.5 billion -- has not only been a complete waste of money, it has clearly endangered the health of teenage girls." -- Matt Foreman, Executive Director National Gay and Lesbian Task Force on a federal study that showed one in four (26 percent) teenage girls aged 14 to 19 has a sexually transmitted disease (STD).

QUOTE #3

"As we couples here tonight and the 214 couples in the Photo Project all make our way through life with the partners we love, we do it with strength and bravery and without regrets.

I'm proud to be a lesbian, I'm proud and joyful to have been with my beloved partner Patricia Sullivan for 20 years but Trish and I, just like all the other couples here... stay together ...in love... but...waiting.

We are all waiting for the 1100 federal and 700 state rights this country so freely gives to legally married couples to help strengthen their families. Not that we aren't strong... but we are waiting ...for equality... and it does matter to our families." -- Vice Chair of the Allentown Human Relations Commission Liz Bradbury, quoted at the dedication ceremony of MCCLV's new space.

QUOTE #4

"Be careful whom you hate; it may be someone you love."

Distelfink @4/08 by Ruby Zebu 'Apples to Oranges'

Time Magazine says: "Writer John Cloud looks at how the differences between straight and gay relationships factored into his own breakup and that of same-sex couples in general. Although studies point to better communications and other dynamics between gay partners, vs. straight couples, researchers also have found a higher breakup rate; in one report, 21% of same-sex couples ended their relationship, vs. 14% of married straight couples."

What's wrong with this picture? Answer: They are comparing straight legally married couples who get divorced, to same-sex couples in any kind of a relationship who break up. Of course the stat for all relationships is higher for break-ups than the stat for legally married relationships. Duh! If you compare every kind of relationship, even one-night stands - I'd guess lesbians would top the other parings for length...
